Why does any of this technical stuff matter?

I have costs associated with making printables and offering them free for download. I have a choice on how to recoup the costs – ads or charging for printables. At this point, I've chosen ads. If my files are hosted incorrectly, my ads are not being seen and I have no way to recoup my costs. If I cannot pay for the website, I cannot offer free files.

I own copyright of my works as these are my intellectual property. These files may not be shared under fair use. In the US, one factor to consider in a fair use analysis is this: the effect of the use upon the potential market for or value of the copyrighted work. If my files are distributed any place other than my website, it hurts the potential market of the work because I can earn money from the ad revenue on my blog.

You may:

- Use my printables in a group or classroom setting
- Share the link to my blog to others who might be interested (and please do!)
- Post online about the printable (for example—take a picture of your child or student using it), giving proper credit to themeasuredmom.com.

You may not:

- Link directly to the pdf file online— people must be able to visit my website to get the printable.
- Sell or distribute this file
- Host this file on your own website or any other website (including Facebook groups and forums)
- Upload this file to a shared website (i.e. 4shared.com, mediafire, dropbox)
- Claim these files or sell them as your own
- Print and sell my printables to others

- A teacher may not send the pdf file out to all her teacher friends and/or parents.

- A co-op group may print off multiple copies for the kids in the co-op.
- A co-op group may not send the pdf file to all the members in the co-op.
