It is important to know the issues and part of that is looking for reliable information on the internet.

Your assignment is to look up information and find out the answers to the following questions. You can look up videos, websites, blogs, articles or even books and magazines but you have to record your source too. Doing research is great but the best way to do it is to have the questions already formed. I am going to help out by giving you some of the questions. The big question is: "What is the situation with access to water for First Nations People in Canada?". Answer as many as possible of the following questions.

What are the problems with the water?

What are the pollutants that make the water unsafe? What is the source of the pollutants?

Who is affected in the Native communities and how many people does it affect?

Where are these people/communities? (perhaps a map)

Who is responsible for fixing the problem?

What are some of the solutions?

How much would it cost to fix the problems?

Are all the problems the same?

Are there any success stories?

Who is to blame for this issue and/or who is blaming whom?

Any other information or personalities that you come across as you do your research.

* Remember to include your sources – Google is not a resource – it is a search engine. Much like a library is not a source but the books are. ****
